BOMB DISCOVERED IN BELMONT PALACE

Harold Vanderbilt, it is said, found a bomb in one of the rooms and had it removed without exciting the throng in the Over twenty private detectives were on duty at Marble House yesterday. Mr. Belmont cannot understand how an outsider could pass this cordon of men and place a fatal machine in the house.

Harold Vanderbier, seen at the Casino, denied that he had found a bomb, or that there was anything of an unusual nature at the snuffrage meeting.

"A Contemptible Hoax."

"The story is a miserable and contempt-the hush," was highly comment. Nervous at Marble House also denied that any bomb had been found by Vanderbilt, any of the guests or any one in Mrs. Belmont's employ.

In spite of denials, it is common talk at the Casino that an explosive of some kind had been found in the room of an old friend of the hush it up, so as not to have any detrimental effect on the suitcase meeting planned for next Saturday.

Both managers looked carefully over the goods their pitchers had, and it looks as if they are going to be satisfied with the condition and all ready to do their bit to help the team climb out of the cellar situation.

DeCoubas will go in for the Athletics, and Doneyan, who stopped the Athletics at a critical time yesterday, will start to-day to put his team into the lead.
